As the PDF file is such an important and useful document format, you may be wondering why people would like to convert your PDF to JPG. Alt has to do with two factors: 1) Security has already completed a form on the web? You will notice that sometimes a PDF file can be interactive, where you can fill it. With these From PDF files, you can insert and edit information, select the drop-down menus and more. This is a great feature, but it brings with it a number of security issues. If you can edit PDF files, it may also be that someone else can either on purpose or accidentally. Converting a PDF to a JPG effectively "Fatena" the document, removing these layers of interactive possibilities. It basically goes from a preenchable PDF file to a fixed static image that cannot be easily changed. You can share it without fear of someone easily tampering with your information. 2) JPG file size When you convert from PDF to JPG (or "Flatten", your document), you will likely reduce the size of your original PDF file to a small amount. JPEG is a compressed image format, which means it is usually lower resolution than other image formats. JPG is still a good image format, which makes it a popular choice to share images on the web. But PDF files are still a superior document format when compared to JPG files. A PDF document is usually better in terms of functionality than files such as JPG, PNG, etc. PDF vs JPG files for documents A JPG image is not an ideal file format for reading documents. In general, conversion of your image to PDF produces better results. PDFs tend to have better quality PDF pages have the added benefit of being more easily edited with common software than JPEGs, which require image software like Photoshop. PDF pages also tend to be clearer and easier to read. JPGs offer some advantages such as smaller file size and additional security when it comes to PDF forms.
